The Pocket Pond

A CARE PACKAGE

Before we hop in — a little paperwork.

Official Lily Pad Permission Slip

You are allowed to rest before you're "done."

You are allowed to do the small version of the task, or none of it at all.

You are allowed to need softness today, even if yesterday you didn't.

You are allowed to move at frog speed — low to the ground, close to the water, in no rush to leap.

WHAT'S IN THIS POND

○ Three soft rituals for hard moments · ○ A comfort menu (low-spoon to higher-effort)
○ A sensory reset checklist · ○ A build-your-own emergency froggy kit

No task on this page is required. It's all just here if you want it.

SOFT RITUALS

Three little rituals for three different kinds of hard.

For "everything is too loud" days

1. Dim or turn off one light source near you.
2. Put on one soft, repetitive sound (rain, fan, hum) or silence.
3. Hold something with texture — a blanket, a sleeve, a smooth stone.
4. Give yourself 5 minutes before deciding what happens next.

For "I can't start anything" days

1. Pick the smallest possible piece of the task — smaller than feels reasonable.
2. Set a timer for 2 minutes. Just that piece.
3. When the timer ends, you're allowed to stop. Truly.
4. If you keep going, great. If not, that 2 minutes still counts.

For "wound up and can't land" nights

1. Lower the lights and lower your body — sit or lie somewhere low and supported.
2. Slow your exhale so it's longer than your inhale, a few rounds.
3. Name 3 things you can feel touching your skin right now.
4. Let the day end unfinished. Tomorrow's pond will still be there.
